the story revolves around the little girl lata, whose adored mother, mrs. rupa, is determined to find a suitable husband for her. after a string of unsuitable suitors, she finally finds mrityunjay, the son of a rich textile merchant, who likes her and treats her well, but who, unfortunately, is already engaged. but i have to confess that for me, a suitable boy isnt about the aunt or uncle. its about the boy. at times a suitable boy can be difficult, but when it isnt, its also achingly sweet, a beautifully written and structured love letter to family, friends, and the city of mombasas, where the book takes place.. i had a strange dream that he has come into my life, but hes not really mine, he is more of a possession, like a talisman that i can hold on to at any point in my life. i wish that he could be mine to keep, to carry with me. the new yorker the uniqueness of a suitable boy is that it is not so much a novel as a memoir, a novel about a memoir. not only does the novel foreground the memoirs of the aunt and uncle, but it also gives us a background on the lives of the real-life boy, vikram dass seth, and his parents. the result is that while one is reading about the family history, which is the narrative thread, there is also a great deal of autobiography that helps in understanding vikram seth. he was a serious student, and his parents were academic scholars. he spent his childhoods in canada and india, and his book is filled with rich details of those countries. he didnt spend much time studying in the us, but his experiences there are detailed. the new york times book review in a suitable boy, i thought i was reading about a boy who had written a book about his life and that if i read it with the right kind of eyes, i would be able to read the book about his life, about his parents and his family. i was right. if i read the book with a different kind of eyes, i couldnt help but read about a boy and his parents, and i still cant. and thats a very special thing. the book hasnt lost its magic for me. i am in love with it all over again. i am sure i will read it again. seths other story is about an elderly man, mr. parvati prasad rizvi, the owner of the shivleya, who is married to a fine lady, the beloved mrs. prasad, who cannot bear the fact that he is old and needs to go to live in a place called mirgaon, the town where he grew up, where his childhood friend satish patel (gurpreet ghuggi) has just bought a toy factory. satishs father, suresh patel (neelam vyas), wants satish to marry a very rich girl, and so they are in a hurry to buy a toy factory. satishs wife, rajeshwari, is a somewhat silly woman who wants the toy factory to be successful so that she can make up for what she calls her mistake of marrying a poor man. she is going to move to bombay to work in an office, and is sad because her mother will come and live in mirgaon and she wont be around. she does not know that her husband has been cheating on her with satishs previous wife. mr. prasad loses the factory to a rich man, and he travels to bombay with his family, though his wife stays behind in mirgaon, and all of the patel family are at the toy factory. 5ec8ef588b
